

silen

on other apps,
people open
chats.

on silen,
people.

world's first presence-only messaging app.

conversations exist only while both people are present.

then vanish. forever. no exceptions.

THE PROBLEM WITH EVERY APP YOU USE TODAY

your words never really disappeared.

Every message you have ever sent is sitting on a server somewhere. Every argument. Every vulnerable moment. Every thing you said in confidence.

WhatsApp has it. Telegram has it. Signal has it.
Even Snapchat's disappearing messages leave metadata.
View once still means viewed — and stored.

Relationships end. Context changes. People change.
But the words don't.

every app asks you to trust a server with your privacy.

silen removes the server from the equation entirely.

THE MECHANISM

presence only.

no presence. no conversation. no exceptions.

01 both online

A conversation only begins when both people are simultaneously present in the app.

02 talk freely

Messages travel via encrypted realtime channels. Nothing touches a database. Ever.

03 one leaves

The moment either person closes the app or exits — session destroyed immediately.

04 gone forever

No history. No logs. No server record. No cache. As if it never happened.

silen stores exactly one thing:

usernames, invite codes, circle connections.

never messages. never media. never call logs. never.

FEATURES THAT MAKE PRIVACY NON-NEGOTIABLE

privacy is not a setting. it is enforced.

screenshot & screen recording blocked silen uses Android FLAG_SECURE — making it technically impossible for the OS to capture any screen content from within the app. not a warning. a hard block.

no screenshot. no screen recording. no exceptions.

mutual presence required

a conversation only begins when both people actively open the app simultaneously. no one can read anything when the other is offline.

both present — or nothing exists.

auto-end on phone lock lock your screen for 60 seconds — session ends automatically.

all messages cleared from device memory instantly.

WHY OTHER APPS FALL SHORT

disappearing messages aren't disappearing.

WhatsApp view once

metadata stays. delivery receipts stay. notification previews stay. screenshot is possible.

Snapchat

screenshot alerts exist because screenshotting is expected. stories saved. history retained by default.

Telegram secret chats device-to-device — but either device can screenshot freely. no mutual presence required.

Signal disappearing msgs timer-based, not presence-based. messages exist for minutes or hours before deletion.

Instagram vanish mode inside the most surveillance-heavy app on your phone. the irony is architectural.

silen: conversation requires mutual presence. both here — or nothing exists.

screenshot blocked. translation private. session auto-ends. no server memory.

NOT FOR EVERYONE. THAT IS THE POINT.

silen is not replacing your apps.

it is your side app. for the conversations that matter most.
the ones you would never send anywhere else.

couples

protecting intimacy. your most vulnerable moments stay between two people — not on a server.

close friends

the real talk. the 3am conversation. things you can only say when you know it disappears.

founders

sensitive ideas, honest feedback, real strategy — without creating a permanent paper trail.

cross-language

two people. any languages. real-time translation that disappears with the conversation.

anyone who has ever regretted sending a message — and wishes it could truly, permanently be gone.

important:

silen is not for everyone. max 10,000 people. when it is full — it is full.
the intimacy of the network is the product itself.

A NOTE FROM THE FOUNDER

i built silen because i was tired of feeling watched in my own conversations.

every app we use today is quietly building a permanent record of our private lives. our fears. our fights. our most vulnerable moments — sitting on a server somewhere.

silen is my answer to that. not a feature. not a privacy setting buried three menus deep. a fundamental reimagining of what a conversation even is.

you are holding an early build. it is real — conversations work, messages vanish, nothing is stored. screenshot is blocked. translation disappears. if something breaks, tell me. if something moves you, tell me that too.

10,000 people. no more. ever.
the intimacy of the network is the product.
